SYNOPSIS | JOE is a lonely man, working in a lost and found office with little contact to the outside world. In his free time too, his only social interactions are within the online incel-community in forums, where he shares his frustrations about women with other men.

When a disassembled mannequin turns up at his office however, he is increasingly drawn to her. He puts her together, takes care of her and seems to develop a connection that he's incapable of finding with a real woman. He tells his incel community about the relationship and is met with initial support.

Joe spends more and more time with the mannequin and sees all in her that he's been looking for: the perfect woman who listens to him and doesn't talk back. But his feelings increasingly clash with the deep-seated hate he's cultivated through the incel community. And soon he spirals into a tragic escalation of his fears, which ultimately drives him to despair.
